

Richard Fox PCC – Leadership Coach

Richard qualified as a coach in 2001 to complement his roles as an experienced business mentor and training facilitator. He works mainly with executive, senior management, and team leaders, helping them enhance their effectiveness in their role and prepare for future challenges and opportunities.

He is often described as practical, proactive, wise, and warm. When clients partner with Richard they have the feeling of being listened to, of considering new options, of being challenged and inspired to act.

Richard is a credentialed coach and member of the International Coach Federation. He holds a Bachelors degree in Economics and is a Master NLP Practitioner (NLP is the study and modelling of excellence).

He is regarded for his breadth and depth of business knowledge gained throughout his career as a business adviser. Prior to creating The Learning Corporation LLP in 1993 he had a successful career with PriceWaterhouse Coopers and KPMG. He has extensive experience of SMEs as well as working internationally in over 20 countries including China, Taiwan, India, Middle East, Africa and throughout Europe. Client companies include Canon, HP, IBM, KPMG, Sony, Tebodin BV, Wokingham District Council, University of Surrey, and Stevens & Bolton LLP.

Typical topics raised by clients include how to improve:

- Leadership at organisational and team levels
- Managing change
- Skills in working relationships
- Managing change
- Work-life balance
- Visioning, strategy and planning
- Attitudes, beliefs and assumptions
- Creativity and innovation
- Strategic alliances and acquisitions
- Delegation and motivation

His first book 'Creating a Purposeful Life' was published in June 2012. His second book 'Working Well with Others' will be published late in 2018.

Apart from the enjoyment gained in his work, he has a keen interest in trekking, choral music, travel, sport, reading, socialising and as a member of his local church.
